

READY FOR THE TRIAL

THE JURY IN THE TOBACCO MEN'S CASE NOW COMPLETE.

When the fourth day of the work of securing a jury for the trial of the ten defendants of the American Tobacco Company on the charge of conspiracy ended yesterday, in the Court of General Sessions, the jury was at last complete, and the trial was adjourned until Monday morning. The jury appeared to be an unusually intelligent one.

When court opened there were twelve jurors in the box, but only five had been sworn. One of the twelve left the box almost immediately after Justice Fitzgerald's gavel had fallen on his desk, on a peremptory challenge from the defense. He was Joseph Marston, the sixth juror. Rumors were spread in the courtroom before Mr. Marston was challenged that he had been talking about the case, but the fact that he was not examined by the Court was considered to be a vindication of his conduct as a juror. The challenge left the defense only one peremptory challenge to exercise on seven jurors.

Mr. Hart, a heavy-set keeper, of No. 148 West Twentieth-st., was examined for Mr. Marston's place. He said he had a prejudice against trusts and the directors of trusts, and was excused by consent. Edward Goett was finally sworn as the sixth juror. He lives in the Annexed District, and is engaged in the manufacture of wood. His product, aration used in making explosives. His product, aration used in making explosives. His product, aration used in making explosives.

Mr. Choate was not as humorous as usual yesterday, and the only time that his questions brought forth comment was while he was examining Mr. Bryan.

Have any prejudice against rich men? "Not at all," was the reply. "I am rich myself."

This is the jury as finally selected.

AN UNPLEASANT HOMECOMING.

A NEW-YORK MERCHANT AND HIS FAMILY HAVE A NARROW ESCAPE ON THE BRIDGE.

Charles W. Prankard, a New-York merchant, who lives at No. 17 South Oxford-st., Brooklyn, and his family had a narrow escape from injury on the Brooklyn Bridge last night. The Prankards had just returned from Europe, and were being driven to their home in a coach of the Henry St. lines, No. 176 South Oxford-ave., Brooklyn. In the vehicle were Mr. and Mrs. Prankard, their daughter, a baby and its nurse. The driver was John Meyers, Strapped to the coach were a number of trunks and boxes.

When the party had reached the Brooklyn tower of the bridge the driver attempted to turn out for another wagon, and the pole caught in the lattice work. The driver was thrown violently from his seat against an iron railing, and he had come a foot or so higher would have been thrown from the structure into the river.

The right front wheel of the coach was smashed and the frightened horses kicked the front of the vehicle into a wreck, and then ran away, but were stopped about three hundred feet from the entrance to the bridge.

The Prankards were not hurt, but they had received a severe jolting. They got out of the coach and walked toward the entrance to the bridge. They secured their trunks, were driven to the right side of the coach, and then ran away, but were stopped about three hundred feet from the entrance to the bridge.

The first reports of the accident were so alarming that four ambulances and surgeons were sent out.

IRISH VOLUNTEERS LOSE THEIR CASE.

THEIR RIGHT TO PARADE WITH FIREARMS ON DECEMBER DAY ABANDONED IN COURT.

Justice Pryor in the Supreme Court yesterday decided in favor of the Police Commission in the suit brought against them by the Irish Volunteers for the right to parade with firearms on December day.

"I do not see why," Mr. Platt replied, "I should think that it would be probable to have the new law of the city, which has been passed by the Board of Aldermen, enforced by officials in sympathy with the administration."

The Senator believes that the passage of the law is in sight.

Mr. Platt expects
